The Made in Italy of Italian design launches a message: Peace is more important than the economy

Italian entrepreneurship is facing an unexpected international crisis with certain repercussions on the business world. A war that goes beyond the borders of Ukraine and affects the whole West. Faced with this umpteenth challenge, some companies in the Italian furniture sector wanted to launch a message of solidarity and hope by expressing their closeness to the populations affected by the conflict and above all by reiterating that for them peace is more important than the economy and that they are ready to address the consequences that sanctions on Russia will have both from the point of view of exports and from the point of view of the supply of raw materials and access to energy.

For Michele Gasperini, CEO of Tonelli Design, the iconic glass brand, "War and Design are two words that cannot find a place within the same sentence. The design that designs and creates for the future and for life is the concept that is farthest from war which is physical, psychological and moral destruction. When all this ends, the Ukrainian population will come together again, there will be houses, buildings and cities to be rebuilt. We'll have to restore beauty to reign over the rubble to try, as far as possible, to alleviate the wounds that war inflicts on the whole world today."

On the same wavelength Antonio Zerilli, Managing Director of Zerica, the historic Sicilian brand specializing in machinery for sustainable water management: "The cost we will pay as entrepreneurs, as citizens will be very high but it is a sacrifice that we feel we have to face. to fight any form of war and aggression".

There are those who had already distanced themselves from the Russian market as the company specialized in staircases and windows Fontanot and today they are even more convinced of their choice: "For some time we have limited our presence in Russia to a minimum by reducing exports to a very difficult and conflicting - confirms Laura Fontanot, Group Vice-President. The sanctions will have an important weight, but the important thing is to understand that they are nothing compared to the violence we see every day on TV and the courage that the Ukrainian people and their president are showing. But thanks to this courage, this sense of cohesion, there will perhaps be a wide-ranging change of course, if we are able to draw a huge opportunity from a tragic and unthinkable crisis."

There are those who bring peace and respect into their corporate statute. Terratinta Group, a Romagna-based reality of Italian ceramics, has no doubts: "As a Benefit Company we believe in peace, in respect for dialogue and personal dignity. In a strongly interconnected world like ours, the pain even of distant peoples affects us all in the same way - recalls Luca Migliorini.

"We strongly want to build a better, sustainable and peaceful future for the new generations. We commit ourselves daily, concretely for a sustainable future and for this reason we can only condemn the war."

"The Ukrainian people are in our thoughts at this particular moment in history and we believe that cohesion and support are the best weapons to be able to fight this dramatic war."

The Gabel Group with the Italian Red Cross to support the Ukrainian people

Through the separate deliveries, organized thanks to the support of the Italian Red Cross, the Gabel Group has donated a pile of quilts to support the Ukrainian population at this time of serious humanitarian crisis. The historic Como-based household linen company, 100% Made in Italy, has chosen to show its closeness to a country hard hit by an ongoing conflict, which is creating hundreds of thousands of refugees.

Michele Moltrasio, President and CEO of the Group says: "I hope that all Italian companies will mobilize to help the Ukrainian population, the goal must be to create a real humanitarian bridge: our gesture wants to express our participation and proximity to the populations affected by the conflict. The human drama is obviously our first concern, beyond the important economic interests that our country has in Ukraine... I would like to thank all the Gabel staff who today more than ever have actively acted in support of others, confirming the inherent values of the company's DNA, which has always been animated by solid ethical integrity and a corporate philosophy aimed at respecting the laws in force and 'love for the environment, well-being for its collaborators and all human beings.'
